Technical Panel Comments

In the March 3 Technical Panel meeting where the reliability-related information was introduced, a member representing transmitters sought clarification that the changes only pertained to the defined term reliability-related information and not to other references to the wider range of reliability-related information. Indeed, these changes only refer to the defined term, and the renaming of this defined term will help reduce such future ambiguities, and not affect market participant obligations.

In the May 26 Technical Panel meeting where the reliability-related information item was voted on to post for stakeholder comments, a member representing consumers asked whether the on-line systems required to collect the information were running and functional. These systems have been functioning for several years.

There were no other comments from Technical Panel members.

Stakeholder Comments

The broader stakeholder community provided no comments on the proposal.
