Daniela,

Thank you but I was already on that link. I found the audio to be really poor so I connected by phone at the same time to get better audio. I went through both Webinars. I had one remark that I made regarding the allocation of resources for collecting input. Providers, transmitters and distributors have well paid staff to provide input to every aspect and every cycle of planning in order their agenda be addressed. This is transparent but incredibly skewed view of the universe. Individual citizens and small organizations do not have the financial resources to provide the same weight in the planning cycles. So when will that be balanced? Does it ever change? The results of the planning takes money from the "Have nots" and gives it to the people who "Have lots".
